

Creating channels from templates

In AirSend, any channel can be a template for another channel; however, you can create a channel and just use it as a template. The new channel will include the same files, actions, and wiki content as the template, and have the same background and logo if you have customized them.

To use a channel as a template, click Advanced when you create the new channel, and choose the template channel from the Copy from channel drop-down list.

A channel is a light-weight space where you communicate and collaborate with anyone to get work done.
